

Guide for public Zotero library on international law of Women, Peace and Security

October 2021

This guide and the resource library are funded by the AHRC under the project A Feminist International Law of Peace and Security at the LSE Centre for Women, Peace and Security. Many thanks to Michaela Chen for her work preparing the library and guide.

Accessing Sources

The library is available at: https://www.zotero.org/filps-lse_wps/library

The Opening Screen includes three areas: the folders, the main area, the search bar and the tags. These can be seen as follows:

[NOTE: the coloured boxes are added for ease of reference and will not appear on the main screen]

The Red Box is the Main Area. This is where the sources will appear. If you'd like to open a source, you can double click on the item once it has appeared in the Main Area. For more information about accessing sources, go to Accessing Sources Section.

The Yellow Box displays the sub-section Folders. If you select a folder or sub-section, the sources in that folder will be displayed in the main area.

NOTE: If a folder has a black arrow (\blacktriangleright) beside the folder icon, that means there are further options within the folder and if you click on the arrow – a drop down menu will appear with a list of further sub-folders.

The Green Box is the Search Bar. For more information on the Search bar, go to the Search Bar Section.

In the Main Area, once you have clicked on a source, it will become highlighted and further details will appear in the lower pane of the window.

Once you click on the folder icon, the relevant sources will appear in the Main Area.

How to Search

The Search Bar allows you to perform selective searches based on Title, Author or Year.

You can still perform general searches through the Search Bar function, for example if you want to search for "Peace" to see all items with "Peace" in their title.

NOTE: If you click on the magnifying glass, a drop down menu will appear that will let you switch between "Title, Creator, Year" and "Title, Creator, Year + Full-Text Content".

This can be helpful if you want to search for items based on their title/case name or if you know a specific author.

Please note that not all text is readable through the Zotero search function, so switching to search using "Full-Text Content" will not guarantee you will bring up all relevant content.
